The following gives an insight into how and why tapping into the entire WatchPro platform is so important for so many brands.

MARKET

WatchPro Market is a consumer-facing event where brands can meet and sell to watch lovers. It takes place at the Old Truman Brewery, at the heart of Shoreditch where Londoners gather every weekend to shop, socialise and eat out at a myriad of markets spanning vintage vinyl to futuristic foodie concept. Like every market, the emphasis here is on the informal, with brands supplied with just tables, pop-up banners and power. The watches and the people who design and make them are the stars here, and the concept makes it possible to keep costs down so that more independent brands can participate.

As well as the London-based launch event, WatchPro is taking the event global and will follow the same recipe with events in Berlin and Munich in Europe to New York and Miami in the states.

LOCATION

Held in the trendiest part of London, Old Truman Brewery offers exhibitors access to thousands of young and enthusiastic watch, jewellery and fashion enthusiasts. Even without promotional events, the venue is flooded with people enjoying a day in the city's most creative neighbourhood.

AUDIENCE

WatchPro has over 300,000 users attend the site every month and with attendance to WatchPro market, all exhibitors are placed directly in front of them. Given a permanent place on the site, exhibitors will be featured via picture galleries and news coverage of latest releases and company-related news along with interviews with chief executives and company profile pieces.

LOGISTICS

WatchPro Market has space for over 30 exhibitors and positions will be available on a first come, first served basis. Included in the package is space for a 6 foot x 2.3 foot table, a promotional banner and power supply at the venue. All exhibitors will also be given a permanent position in a WatchPro Market channel on watchpro.com

Feedback from past ceremonies

"The WatchPro Awards has become a date in the watch industry diary. It is a chance for retailers, wholesalers and everyone in the industry to come together and acknowledge the amazing job people some people do.

Independent businesses and multiple groups should support the dinner every year as it's one of the few times the watch industry celebrates its success."

Simon Walton, Managing Director, Berry's

"First and foremost, what an amazing evening, not only because as a business we won an award but also to hear the well-respected Jean-Claude Biver speak in person.

The evening was fantastically hosted, not only an amazing venue but first class food and company with friends old and new."

Jonathan Tyers, David M Robinson

"It was my first time attending and I have to say I was thoroughly impressed. The event was really well planned, well paced, had the great and good of the industry there (a good sign it is well respected) and made a big effort to focus on the achievements of the British watch industry."

Dan Baker, Watch Shop

DATE: 9 November 2023

Free-flowing drinks, three course meal and networking

TIME: 7:00pm 'till late

The nomination process for the WATCHPRO Awards is uniquely democratic inasmuch as watch retailers vote for the watch brands that have been performing best for them, while suppliers vote for their favourite retailers. So all nominees are chosen for by those that know best. The nominations are then whittled down to a shortlist before culminating in a glittering awards ceremony on the evening in November. High profile members of the watch industry, hard-working employees and innovative owners and managers are in attendance, always proud to see well-deserving staff members receive recognition for their efforts which so often can go unnoticed.

WATCHPRO presents a range of opportunities for companies to sponsor these prestigious awards, which not only make their mark in the hospitality industry, but also gain nationwide exposure in various press such as newspapers and online coverage.
